Anti-Muslim activists march in numerous cities across the United States

NEW YORK CITY (The Washington Post) - Anti-Muslim activists hoisted American flags and delivered fiery speeches in rallies across the country Saturday, facing off against crowds of counter-demonstrators in several cities and exposing the visceral rage that has come to define America's political extremes.

ACT for America, a lobbyist organization with close ties to the Trump administration, organized nationwide marches to oppose Islamic law, which the group believes is a threat to American society.

The turnout was relatively small, with rally crowds of a few dozen in many cities outnumbered almost 10 to one by counter-demonstrators who tried to drown out their voices with drums, bullhorns and cowbells.

ACT, which has drawn condemnation from civil rights groups for its frequent criticism of Islam and its efforts to pass state-level bills targeting Islamic law and refugees, organized the protests as a nationwide "March Against Sharia" and a defense of human rights.

"We're here protecting their rights, and they're trying to shut us down!" Pax Hart, the organizer of the New York City rally told his audience, referring to the gathering of hundreds of leftist activists and masked anarchists across the street. "It's insane!"

ACT for America, which the Southern Poverty Law Center recognizes as a hate group, was founded in 2007. Its leaders, who claim a 500,000-strong membership nationally, have labeled Islam a "cancer," propagated theories of a secret plot by Muslims, Democrats, communists and the media to destroy America from within, and sponsored lectures on how to monitor and oppose American mosques.

The group's founder, Brigitte Gabriel, has said that she is anti-Sharia, not anti-Muslim, a point that a number of the group's speakers repeated Saturday. But Gabriel also has said that all practicing Muslims adhere to Sharia, and speakers on Saturday made sweeping statements about Islam as an enemy of the state.

"We understand what Islam is, and we say 'no,' " Pawl Bazile, a member of the right-wing Proud Boys group, told a cheering crowd of a few dozen people in downtown Manhattan. "You're in the land of Budweiser and bikinis, for God's sake." Anyone who doesn't like it can move to Saudi Arabia or Syria, he said.

POWERBALL: A customer buys a Powerball ticket, Thursday, June 8, in Chicago. The Powerball jackpot has grown up to $435 million, after more than two months without a winner. The jackpot for Saturday night's drawing would tie for the nation's 10th largest lottery prize. G-Jun Yam/AP

Powerball ticket worth $447M sold in California

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A single winning Powerball ticket matching all six numbers was sold in California and will claim an estimated $447.8 million jackpot, lottery officials said.

It was not immediately known where the ticket that will claim the 10th largest lottery prize in U.S. history was sold, according to Powerball spokesman Randy Miller.

The lucky numbers drawn Saturday night were 20-26-32-38-58, and the Powerball number was 3.

Miller said the estimated jackpot prize is based on a winner choosing an annuity, which pays off over 29 years. The cash prize would be $279.1 million. Both prize amounts would be before taxes are deducted.

Before the drawing Saturday night the jackpot was estimated at $435 million.

The jackpot had grown because no one had matched all the numbers since April 1.

The odds of winning Saturday's drawing were only one in 292.2 million.

Powerball is played in 44 states, Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

EPA vow to clean up Superfund sites fuels skepticism

BRIDGETON, Mo. (The Washington Post) – Dawn Chapman had listened with surprise and skepticism as the new head of the Environmental Protection Agency vowed to clean up West Lake, the nuclear waste dump that has filled her days and nights with worry.

"The past administration honestly just didn't pay attention to (it)," Scott Pruitt stressed on a local radio show in April. "We're going to get things done at West Lake. The days of talking are over."

The next month, Pruitt took to television to say a plan for the site was coming "very soon" as part of his push to prioritize Superfund cleanups across the country. "It's not a matter of money," he said. "It's a matter of leadership and attitude and management."

On a blue-sky afternoon, Chapman sat in her small home in this leafy St. Louis suburb and mulled the latest set of promises from Washington – this time from a man known more for suing the EPA and rolling back environmental regulations than for cracking down on pollution.

LINKED DISEASES?: Meagan Beckermann and son Trevor Beckermann, 7, live in St. Louis, Mich., near a Superfund site. She wonders if Trevor's alopecia areata is connected to contamination. Air, water and soil tests by government agencies have shown no link to health issues. Photos by Linda Davidson/The Washington Post

Promises, promises

"Why our site? Why now? Can he keep those promises?" the mother of three wondered. Her family lives only a couple of miles from West Lake, a contaminated landfill that contains thousands of tons of waste from the World War II-era Manhattan Project. "My biggest fear is he's just going to put a Band-Aid on it."

In Bridgeton and elsewhere, others are asking similar questions with various degrees of hope and hesitation. In his previous role as Oklahoma's attorney general, Pruitt had long-standing ties to oil and gas companies and a litigious history fighting the EPA. And although he has called the federal Superfund program "vital" and a "cornerstone" of the EPA's mission, the Trump administration has proposed slashing its funding by 30 percent.

With more than 1,300 Superfund sites nationwide – some of which have lingered for decades on the EPA's ever-growing "priorities list" – it's unclear how Pruitt will back up his professed commitment in an age of scorched-earth budgets. Critics worry that a single-minded focus on speeding up the process could lead to inadequate cleanups.

"This agency has not responded to Superfund with the type of urgency and commitment that the people of this country deserve," Pruitt reiterated Wednesday – days before a contingent from Bridgeton would arrive in Washington, D.C., in hopes of meeting with him. He said he understands communities' distrust, not just about West Lake but many sites. "I'm very sensitive and sympathetic to what their concerns are," he said. "This agency has failed them. ... They have a right to be skeptical."

> "This agency has failed them. ... They have a right to be skeptical."
> – Scott Pruitt, new head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Actions first

That they are. Residents in the shadow of Superfund sites remain wary of his pronouncements.

"Actions speak louder than words," said BrieAnn McCormick, whose neighborhood is closest to West Lake.

Families here have long lived with the reality of the site, which got its Superfund designation in 1990. The 200 acres include not just the radioactive waste that was illegally dumped in 1973, but also an adjacent landfill where decomposing trash as deep as 150 feet is smoldering in what scientists call a "subsurface burning event." The fire is now about 600 feet from that other waste.

West Lake has made Bridgeton the kind of place where some parents drive their children to playgrounds far from the landfill. Where some people keep homemade kits in their cars – face masks for days the stench hits, eyedrops for irritation, Tylenol for headaches. Where others trade stories of cancers, autoimmune diseases and miscarriages they're scared could be related to the Superfund site, although air, water and soil tests from the EPA and other government agencies have shown no link.

Activists fault the EPA for moving at a glacial pace. They accuse Republic Services, which took ownership of the landfill in 2008, of trying to avoid full-fledged cleanup.

Similar dynamics are playing out at many Superfund sites, where abandoned mines, contaminated rivers and manufacturing plants have left behind a daunting trail of lead, arsenic, mercury and other harmful substances. Some "mega sites" involve tracing hundreds of chemicals and scores of polluters.

Subject: NEW FEES

Hafa Adai Vice Speaker Terlaje,

The seventy-three (73) fees that will be presented for tomorrow's Public hearing are all NEW fees and were never been charged before to patients.
Regarding to your second question, 10 GCA 80109(c)(1) states " The Authority may establish interim fees for new, un-tariffed services, medication and supplies, without prior legislative approval and without compliance with the Administrative Adjudication Law; provided, that: the interim fees are consistent with the Authority's Net Enhancement Engagement Pricing Model, as prepared by Deloitte & Touche, dated February7, 1992, or such other protocol as may be approved by the Board of Trustees."

Should you have any question, please let me know

Andersen bomber flew close to NKorea airspace

BUZZING AIRSPACE: *A U.S. Air Force B-1B Lancer prepares to take off from Andersen Air Force Base on Guam yesterday and later joins its U.S. Air Force F-15C Eagle fighter escorts from Okinawa, Japan. The aircraft flew in international airspace over waters east of North Korea. This is the farthest north of the Demilitarized Zone any U.S. fighter or bomber aircraft has flown off North Korea's coast in the 21st century, underscoring the seriousness with which the United States takes North Korea's missile threats, according to the U.S. Pacific Command. a newer model machine to help young patients breathe.

The hospital also has an entire wing that's been abandoned because the structure is crumbling.

'Tender loving care' at GMH

Gov. Eddie Calvo has pitched for a $125 million bond-borrowing plan to help GMH renovate its facilities and buy new, lifesaving equipment.

However, the proposal has met with mixed reactions because it would mean a tax increase to meet the future debt payments and provide a stable source of funding subsidy to GMH every year.

In his latest weekly address, the governor offered praise to GMH staff members, who are trying to provide what he called "stellar" service, despite problems such a lack of current equipment and a roof that leaks when it rains.

"Very recently, within a little more than a week, I've had two family members that have received tender loving care from GMH," the governor said. "The first was a joyous occasion where GMH welcomed the birth of my youngest grandson ... again, all healthcare professionals provided excellent care for him and his mother."

The governor said he also had a more anxious and painful experience when his father, former Gov. Paul Calvo, was admitted for care.

"Again, the staff came through with stellar service and was able to nurse my father back to recovery," the governor said. "Now that he is out, he has to get tests done at an outside clinic with equipment not currently available at GMH."

"I want to congratulate the doctors and staff that cared for my father and their exemplary work. The lack of equipment at the hospital is no fault of their own. They made do with what they had, and a great job it was!"

Crisostomo, Gerry Hocog, Franklin Rosalin and Jerome San Nicolas.

Another corrections officer, Fermin Maratita, was also named in the case, according to court documents, but Maratita has resigned from the department.

The men were placed on administrative leave with pay following the arrests.

Payment was also made at their normal rate. The officers' combined annual base pay amounts to nearly $231,000, based on GovGuam's fiscal 2017 third-quarter staffing pattern.

A seventh corrections officer, Shane Cruz, was also arrested in early September on charges of promoting major prison contraband. He has been placed on administrative leave without pay, according to Deputy Director Kate Baltazar. It was Cruz's second adverse action, so he was placed on leave without pay this month.

Cruz made nearly $31,500 annually, according to the fiscal 2017 third-quarter staffing pattern.

According to Baltazar, the decision to place individuals on leave with pay or without pay is made at the discretion of the director.

The purpose of the administrative leave is to ensure an employee's rights are followed as well as ensure that the employee is away from the investigation taking place, Lamorena said in a previous interview.

Recycling fund still lacks rules

By Manny Cruz
manny@postguam.com

While the government of Guam prepares to oversee the Ordot dump's post-closure process in just a few months, a viable solution to decreasing the island's solid waste footprint is still lacking approved rules and regulations, hampering its full implementation.

"The Recycling Revolving Fund was created to reduce waste streams in areas with junk cars, metal wastes and household appliances," said Guam Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Nic Rupley. "A draft set of rules and regulations is nearly complete. This will be our third attempt at getting this thing passed."

Last year, a draft submitted to the Office of the Attorney General was declined, which prompted a few recommendations, according to Rupley.

"This year, we have the assistance of the AG's office in drafting this. So once it gets approved by the attorney general, it'll get passed along to the legislature for their review," he said.

The Recycling Revolving Fund, which is separate from the General Fund, accrues money from recycling fees imposed on individuals renewing their annual motor vehicle registration with the Department of Revenue and Taxation's Division of Motor Vehicles.

As of Sept. 11, there is more than $2.6 million in the recycling fund.

However, the money can't be expended for recycling purposes until rules and regulations for the fund are approved.

GEPA administrator Walter Leon Guerrero was present at the Ordot Landfill status hearing Thursday at the District Court of Guam.

Leon Guerrero said access to the recycling fund would help to greatly reduce the island's trash footprint, prolonging the lifespan of the current landfill.

Exporting solid waste

"This is something the federal receiver has agreed with over and over again," said Sen. Tom Ada. "Batteries, tires, refrigerators, abandoned vehicles – all of those things are trash that could be exported instead of taking up more and more space on our island."

Monies from the recycling fund support the exportation of solid waste through the Recycling Industry Economic Stimulus Program.

The program was introduced in January 2016 by former Sen. Rory Respicio and gives certified local recycling companies $30 per ton of recyclable waste exported to off-island facilities.

Other provisions in the fund allow GEPA to contract professionals to further promote recycling in the community.

Lawmakers last month reversed a decision to appropriate $2.1 million from the fund to the Mayors' Council of Guam, Post files state.

Sen. Fernando Esteves said the law has been clear that the Recycling Revolving Fund must be administered by GEPA – not the council of mayors.

Esteves also included an amendment that would allow an allotment from GEPA to the mayors.

DPHSS: Post-Harvey mosquito boom could affect Guam

By Manny Cruz

While Texas state and federal officials look to control what will be a booming mosquito population in the wake of Harvey, the island's Department of Public Health and Social Services says doctors should similarly be aware of the heightened possibility that diseases like dengue fever or Zika could surface on Guam.

"I think it would be prudent to advise doctors to check their patients' travel histories if they're experiencing flu-like symptoms," said DPHSS Director James Gillan. "People normally think of mosquito-borne diseases coming from Third World countries. But the reality, in situations like this, is that they could very well come here from the United States."

"Typically, there's a two-week incubation period for these diseases. And there's no telling how many people an infected person could affect in the time they're here," Gillan said.

Last week, the Texas Department of State Health Services announced it would conduct aerial spraying of adulticides and larvicides to control and reduce the number of mosquitoes in large breeding grounds created by the rains and associated flooding.

Between diasporic families, college students, military personnel and business travelers alike, the effects of Houston's mosquito boom could very well reach Guam, resulting in the appearance of suspected or confirmed cases of diseases like dengue fever or the Zika virus.

"People are always coming in and out of the island, so the fear that a disease might be introduced here is always realistic, and it's always present," said DPHSS administrator Rosanna Rabago.

Last week, DPHSS announced there were two cases of imported dengue fever on Guam: one confirmed and one suspected. The incident was a reminder that Guam, with such a transient population, should practice vigilance when it comes to managing potential breeding sites.

The Aedes aegypti mosquito is the primary transmitter, or vector, of dengue and Zika viruses; and its presence has been recorded in parts of Texas, including Houston.

While the mosquito is not found on Guam, "once it's introduced, it's only imminent that we'd see Zika and chikungunya virus here as well," Rabago has said.

According to Rabago, the mosquito species commonly found on Guam, Aedes albopictus, is less a concern for public health officials since it feeds on humans and animals.

Aedes aegypti, on the other hand, feeds exclusively on humans.

The Department of Public Health and Social Services reminds the community to remember the four Ds of mosquito prevention:

- Drain: Empty water containers and scrub the sides to remove mosquito eggs at least once every five days.
- Dress: Wear long sleeves, long pants and light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.
- Defend: Properly apply an approved mosquito repellent such as DEET, Picaridin, IR3535, or oil of lemon-eucalyptus.
- Dusk and dawn: Avoid activity during those times when mosquitoes are most active.
