the next four years," Tenorio said.

Republicans, GEC respond

The Republican Party of Guam called the case "an unfortunate situation."

"However, we have every confidence that the lieutenant governor will appear before the court and answer to the complaint appropriately," the party stated.

Party Chairman Jerry Crisostomo said the Republican Party of Guam "continues to support our party's nominee for governor."

"The Republican Party of Guam will have no further comments on the matter until the court issues a decision on the case," the party stated.

One of the charges, official misconduct, could bring questions about Tenorio's bid for governor in the upcoming election. Candidates for public office can be derailed if convicted of a crime of moral turpitude.

Guam Election Commission Executive Director Maria Pangelinan said the commission will determine if official misconduct bars anyone from running for governor if convicted of the crime.

Tenorio is scheduled to appear Oct. 3 in the courtroom of Judge Benjamin Sison.

face the person, Cruz was surprised to see it was the lieutenant governor who had been tugging at his firearm. Cruz quickly released his grip on his holster and held Tenorio by the shoulders to support him from the force of the elbow strike.

Court documents state, "Lt. Gov. Tenorio persisted" in a second attempt that immediately followed. Tenorio reached at the release/retention button on officer Cruz's holster and proceeded to lift his firearm out of it. Tenorio then took hold of the gun with both hands and transferred it to his right hand and held it with his thumb and index finger at the lower portion of the receiver.

"In this orientation, the lieutenant governor held the firearm at eye level dangling its barrel in the direction of officers who were sitting on the tailgate of the official police vehicle assigned to (an) officer," the declaration stated.

According to Sgt. Cruz, Tenorio then stated, "It's that easy. It's that easy! You know, I'm the public safety chairman."

Cruz took back the gun and reholstered it. He noticed Tenorio "reeked of alcohol and that his face was red." Tenorio allegedly continued to repeat how easy it was to take the gun away from the police sergeant and tried a third time to take the firearm.

The officer reported that he blocked each attempt and responded, "Roger, sir. Roger, sir."

Tenorio walked away laughing and greeted other officers in the immediate area but returned to Cruz and said, "Let's try again. It's that easy!" as he tried to grab at Cruz's firearm, court documents state.

Cruz then grabbed Tenorio's wrists and pushed them away and tried to signal a lieutenant governor's staffer, Tony Lujan, who was accompanying Tenorio.

Tenorio walked away and greeted some Guam Fire Department personnel. He then moved from where he had been standing and made his way back to Cruz and grabbed at the holstered firearm for a fifth time. Cruz said he grabbed the lieutenant governor's wrists and this time sternly stated, "Have a good night, sir," the declaration stated.

'I am the public safety chair'

Another officer assigned to provide security at the block party reported seeing Tenorio holding a Heineken beer bottle and greeting other officers. The officer looked back and later saw Cruz "slapping and pushing" Tenorio's hands away from his waist and gear belt. Several other officers reported witnessing the same thing and overheard Tenorio comment, "Do you know who I am? I am the public safety chair," court documents state.

A police lieutenant, who did not see the incident, spoke with Cruz about it and concluded in his report to the police chief that the sergeant acted in a professional manner while "defending himself from an aggressive physical onslaught by the lieutenant governor."

The police lieutenant noted that if this incident had involved "any other citizen on the street and not a high-ranking government official, the outcome would have been much different, possibly resulting in an arrest, and confinement, or (worst) case scenario, a use of deadly force issue," the declaration stated.

Sixth time

When Tenorio attempted to grab the gun a sixth time, he allegedly used more force and the escalation caused Cruz to use greater force – pushing Tenorio in the chest with both hands to create distance between the two. The shove caused Tenorio to stumble backward and another officer had to hold the lieutenant governor up to prevent him from falling.

Tenorio said, "Oh, it's like that! Oh, it's like that!" and Cruz replied firmly, "Yes, it's like that."

Additional resources

OAG investigators obtained a video recording of the incident from surveillance cameras in Tumon, as well as product information concerning the holster Sgt. Cruz used that had two levels of retention to keep the firearm "securely in place" as an individual moves.

Interviews were conducted with the lieutenant governor's driver, a police officer, who reported that Tenorio was drinking alcohol that night, but he did not know how much and did not believe that Tenorio was drunk.

Tenorio's staffer, Lujan, stated he was aware that Tenorio had been drinking alcohol and stated that he had given "about four beers" to Tenorio during the night of the block party. He denied seeing any of the gun-grabbing incident and recalled hearing Tenorio speaking with the police chief on the phone and overhearing him say, "What if somebody was to grab that gun? Can you imagine peoples' intention?"

The police chief was interviewed and stated Tenorio called him to express concern about an "unsafe situation" and that he was able to remove a firearm from a police officer.

Refusal to be recorded

OAG investigators met with Tenorio, at the office of his attorney, Tom Fisher, for the purpose of conducting an interview, but Tenorio did not agree to have the interview recorded in any way by investigators, so they left without conducting the interview.

Assistant Attorney General James Collins believed there was sufficient evidence to charge Tenorio with two misdemeanor counts of reckless conduct for intentionally pointing a firearm at, or in the direction of, another; obstructing governmental functions; and official misconduct.

In August, Tenorio issued a statement requesting a speedy review of the OAG investigation into his decision to grab a police officer's gun from behind. He previously said he meant to teach the officer a lesson, but later apologized.

Tenorio said he was confident he committed "no illegal action" and said his actions were for public safety. He admitted that he does not have a firearms ID.

The lieutenant governor has acknowledged he took the officer's service weapon out of its holster after noticing it did not appear to be securely fastened.

Superior Court marshals showed up at the lieutenant governor's office at Adelup on Monday afternoon, attempting to serve him with the complaint and summons, but they were told Tenorio would not be in the office.

He was served before 3:15 p.m. at a meeting arranged by his attorney.

The summons to appear is for Oct. 3 before Superior Court Magistrate Judge Benjamin Sison.

Guam witnesses subpoenaed in case against Rota mayor

By Bryan Manabat
For The Guam Daily Post

SAIPAN – The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Districts of Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands has subpoenaed a Guam defense employee and a Guam-based CNMI medical referral employee to testify in the trial of Rota Mayor Efraim Atalig.

Efraim Atalig

Anamaria Inos of the CNMI Medical Referral Office in Tamuning, Guam, and Julia Rivera, property dispensary specialist at the Defense Logistics Agency disposition services on Naval Base Guam, were subpoenaed.

Mayor Atalig was indicted in federal court on one count of wire fraud. The prosecution said the mayor had traveled to Guam supposedly for a public purpose but had actually attended a political gathering.

Atalig, represented by David Banes, has pleaded not guilty.

In the CNMI Superior Court, Atalig and seven of his resident directors were separately charged with theft and misconduct in public office.

Co-defendants

The mayor's co-defendants are Department of Labor Resident Director Dexter Apatang, Department of Public Works Resident Director Vanessa Charfauros, Department of Commerce Resident Director Dean Manglona, Department of Public Safety Resident Director Eusebio Manglona, Department of Finance Resident Director Josepha Manglona, Department of Fire and Emergency Medical Services Resident Director Dennis Mendiola and Department of Community and Cultural Affairs Resident Director Magdalena Mesngon.

Their arraignment was set for Sept. 28 at the Rota courthouse.

In federal court, Atalig's trial will begin at 10 a.m. Oct. 16.

Igisomar: 'Be responsible users' of legal marijuana

By Cherrie Anne E. Villahermosa
For The Guam Daily Post

SAIPAN – Sen. Sixto Igisomar said Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands residents should be responsible users once the marijuana legalization law is fully implemented.

Sixto Igisomar

Although the governor signed House Bill 20-178 on Friday, he said it is not yet legal to use marijuana.

"We have 30 days to set up our Cannabis Commission by appointing members from Saipan, Tinian, Rota and the Northern Islands, and our local legislative delegations need to confirm them within 30 days," Gov. Ralph Torres said in signing the Taulamwaar Sensible CNMI Cannabis Act of 2018, or Public Law 20-66.

"Our commissioners have 180 days to create the regulations and promulgate them," the governor said. "The regulations take effect 10 days after adoption and publication in our Commonwealth Register."

Igisomar, the original author of the marijuana bill, thanked the governor for signing it into law.

'It's a big decision'

"I know it's a big decision for you, and I am happy that you gave this bill the opportunity to move forward in the CNMI," he told the governor. "When I first introduced it in the 19th Legislature, it underwent a lot of research and received a lot of comments. We did a lot of work to make sure this cannabis bill would work for the CNMI."

Igisomar added, "I ask the people of the CNMI to be responsible users. It is not an easy task for us to move forward, and the only way to do so is to legalize it but be responsible – do it properly."

Rep. Joseph Deleon Guerrero, the author of the bill's House version that was signed into law, said it includes provisions that aim to protect federal grants.

"There are government agencies that are very concerned about the passage of this bill because the federal government does not recognize the legalization of cannabis," Deleon Guerrero said. "The bill has provisions that address those concerns. Government agencies may still require a zero-drug policy to protect their federal grants, so these won't be taken away. ... I want to give credit to Sen. Sixto Igisomar, the Sensible CNMI group and everybody who helped make this a better bill."

Speaker Ralph Demapan said the House will work on any other concerns to make sure marijuana legalization will work in the CNMI.

The governor vetoed at least six sections of the measure, including those regarding fees and licensing requirements, and has asked the Legislature to pass another bill to address his concerns.
