Malaysia to return 3K tons of plastic waste

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) – Malaysia will send as much as 3,000 tons of plastic waste back to the countries it came from, the environment minister said Tuesday, the latest Asian country to reject rich countries' rubbish.

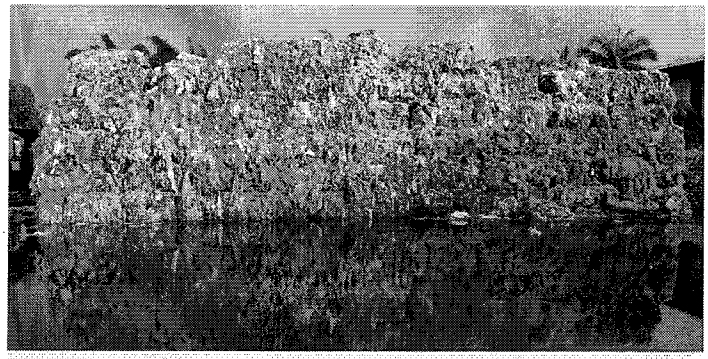

Malaysia last year became the world's main destination for plastic waste after China banned its import, disrupting the flow of more than 7 million tons of the trash a year.

Dozens of recycling factories have cropped up in Malaysia, many without operating licences, and communities have complained of environmental problems.

Yeo Bee Yin, minister of energy, technology, science, environment and climate change, said 60 containers of trash that had been imported illegally would be sent back.

"These containers were illegally brought into the country under false declaration and other offenses, which clearly violates our environmental law," Yeo told reporters, after inspecting the shipments at Port Klang, on the outskirts of the capital.

Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte last week ordered his government to hire a private shipping company to send 69 containers of garbage back to Canada and leave them within its territorial waters if it refuses to accept them.

Canada says the waste, exported to the Philippines between 2013 and 2014, was a commercial transaction done without government consent.

Canada had agreed to take the rubbish back, but Duterte lost patience as arrangements were being made and ordered it out.

14 countries of origin

Malaysian officials have identified at least 14 origin countries, including the United States, Japan, France, Canada, Australia and Britain, for its unwanted waste.

Yeo said citizens of developed nations were largely unaware that their rubbish, which they think is being recycled, is instead mostly being dumped in Malaysia, where it is disposed of using environmentally harmful methods.

A recycling company based in Britain had exported as much as 50,000 tons of plastic waste to Malaysia in the past two years, she said, without identifying the firm.

Yeo said Malaysia would ask foreign governments to investigate such companies.

"We are urging developed nations to review their management of plastic waste and stop shipping garbage to developing countries," she said.

"If you ship to Malaysia, we will return it back without mercy."

Malaysia has already returned five containers of contaminated plastic waste back to Spain.

East Congo villagers kill Ebola health worker, loot clinic

GOMA, Democratic Republic of Congo (Reuters) – A mob in eastern Congo killed an Ebola health worker and looted a clinic, the Health Ministry said Tuesday, underscoring a breakdown in public trust that is hampering efforts to contain the deadly virus.

Attacks on treatment centers by armed groups and mistrust among residents who view the disease as a conspiracy have become major impediments to containing Democratic Republic of Congo's worst-ever Ebola outbreak.

The hemorrhagic fever has so far killed 1,281 people, according to the latest ministry figures, and shows no signs of slowing its spread, with dozens of new cases a week.

The ministry said that on Saturday residents of the village of Vusahiro, in the Mabalako district, "rose up and attacked the local Ebola response team, made up of village residents who were trained to carry out certain response activities."

A hygienist from the infection prevention and control team died of his injuries when he was transferred to hospital, it said.

Responders, health care workers and community members are increasingly subjected to threats from armed groups in hotspots such as Katwa and Butembo, the World Health Organization says, complicating efforts to contain Ebola.
