Payless ShoeSource closing

By Oyaol Ngirairikl
deskeditor@postguam.com

Guam and Saipan will soon lose a favorite shoe retailer, as Payless ShoeSource is closing its stores in this region of the world as well.

Local store officials said they were informed by the parent company a couple of weeks ago that the stores would be closing – this in spite of previous statements noting otherwise. There is no date yet for the closures of the stores, however, the locations on Guam and Saipan are holding closing out sales.

There hasn't been an official statement released regarding the closure of regional stores.

Monte Mesa, general manager of Guam Premier Outlets, where one of the Payless ShoeSource stores is located, said he too has noticed the "closing out" signs on the store windows. He hasn't received official notice of the store closure.

Mesa said the closure isn't for a lack of shoppers – at least at the GPO location.

"The store was doing really well here, from my understanding," he said. "Unfortunately, the parent company is going through some reorganization and that's having an impact here in Guam."

CLOSING: Payless ShoeSource, the discount shoe store chain with two storefronts on Guam, at Micronesia Mall, pictured, and Guam Premier Outlets, will close its Guam and Saipan stores following the bankruptcy reorganization filing that will shutter the retailer's North American stores. David Castro/The Guam Daily Post

The company announced in February that it had filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. This is their second filing in as many years.

"Over the years, we have had highs and lows amidst significant operational and market challenges. Despite our best efforts to address the rapidly changing retail environment, we – like many other retailers – have been forced to face very difficult choices," the press release stated. "The desire to maintain our brand, and to continue serving our global customer base, first led us to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in April 2017. Unfortunately, we emerged from the prior reorganization ill-equipped to survive in today's retail environment, with too much remaining debt, too large a store footprint and a yet-to-be realized systems and corporate overhead structure consolidation."

The inability to cope with a changing retail landscape lead to this year's bankruptcy and subsequent store closures. Guam and Saipan stores were on the initial list of those to be spared along with stores across Latin America, which the February press release noted had "profitable growth."

It's not known how many jobs will be lost regionally as a result of the closings.

Fed likely to cut borrowing costs later this year

SAN FRANCISCO/WASHINGTON (Reuters) – The U.S. Federal Reserve, facing fresh demands by President Donald Trump to cut interest rates, is expected to leave borrowing costs unchanged at a policy meeting this week but possibly lay the groundwork for a rate cut later this year.

New economic projections that will accompany the U.S. central bank's policy statement on Wednesday will provide the most direct insight yet into how deeply policymakers have been influenced by the U.S.-China trade war, Trump's insistence on lower interest rates and recent weaker economic data.

Analysts expect the "dot plot" of year-end forecasts for the Fed's benchmark overnight lending rate – the federal funds rate – will show a growing number of policymakers are open to cutting rates in the coming months, though nowhere near as aggressively as investors expect or Trump wants.

The Fed is also widely, though not universally, expected to remove a pledge to be "patient" in taking future action on rates, opening the door to a possible cut at its coming policy meetings.

Risks may be rising, but "I don't think they want to box themselves into a corner," said Carl Tannenbaum, chief economist at Northern Trust. "The markets are set up for a cut in July, and if they don't get it, financial conditions will tighten."

The federal funds rate is currently set in a range of 2.25% to 2.50%.

The Fed's policy-setting committee is due to release its latest statement and economic projections on Wednesday after the end of a two-day meeting. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell will hold a press conference shortly after.

Banks want in on weed industry

By Lannie Walker
lannie@postguam.com

Banking services for cannabis-related businesses was among the issues discussed during a Guam Bankers Association meeting Tuesday.

"Our community has accepted medicinal marijuana and recreational marijuana, and as members of the community, all of the banks here want to participate when the marijuana-related businesses start popping up," BankPacific President Philip Flores told The Guam Daily Post on Wednesday.

Flores said restrictions from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Internal Revenue Service prohibit banks from accepting money that could be connected to marijuana operations.

"But the way we see it is federal regulators and the federal government, they are all evolving, and eventually banks will be allowed to participate in the MRB (marijuana-related businesses) and that is what we are hoping for," Flores said. "It's going to happen sooner or later – I would rather it happen sooner."

About two weeks ago, Bank of Guam sent a marijuana certification form for all current and new customers to fill. It is a declaration that they are "not directly engaged in a marijuana-related business which in any manner is involved with the handling of marijuana or marijuana-related products." Additionally, the document noted that customers are required to inform the bank if they do become associated with a marijuana-related business. The bank reserves its right to "immediately terminate any or all accounts" with any customer who becomes involved with the cannabis industry.

Lobbying efforts

Tuesday's meeting follows correspondence last week between association members and the president and chairman of the American Banking Association regarding Guam's inclusion in lobbying efforts to ease restrictions on banking with marijuana-related businesses.

Flores said there are businesses nationally that are finding difficulties in banking and are storing large amounts of cash, which can be "just too tempting of a juicy apple" for possible theft.

Allowing banks to work with marijuana-related businesses could also be beneficial to the banking industry, according to Flores.

Man, 32, faces charge of heroin possession

A traffic stop yielded police a pasty brown substance that tested positive for heroin, leading to the arrest of a 32-year-old man.

Anthony Frank H. Cruz was arrested after police pulled him over Tuesday while he was driving on Route 8 in Maite, documents state.

Anthony Frank H. Cruz

According to court documents, police officers saw Cruz's car swerved across lanes of traffic. They conducted a traffic stop but before stopping the car, they saw the driver lean forward in his car several times. When he stopped, the police officers noted that the defendant was very nervous – his face was pale and avoided eye contact with the officers, documents state.

Cruz also allegedly kept his hands inside his sweater despite officers telling him multiple times to refrain from doing so. He allegedly made a statement about where he was coming from, which was contrary to what officers had observed. Officers searched the car and found a container of four unused syringes and the pasty brown substances, which tested presumptive positive for heroin, documents state.

Cruz also wasn't able to produce his driver's license, documents state.

He was charged in the Superior Court of Guam with possession of a Schedule I controlled substance as a third-degree felony, and driving without a license as a violation.

Chargualaf sentencing hearing continued to August

By Nick Delgado
nick@postguam.com

The family of Honofre Chargualaf filled the courtroom of Chief Judge Fran- Tydingco-Gatewood on Wednesday morning to attend his sentencing hearing.

Chargualaf has been in the custody of the federal Bureau of Prisons and has served 25 years of his 44-year sentence. He was convicted in 1995 on drugs and weapons charges.

He is seeking a reduction in his sentence.

Wednesday's hearing at the District Court of Guam, however, was continued to Aug. 5. Defense attorney Leilani Lujan told the court she is awaiting a ruling in a U.S. Supreme Court case that could ultimately determine Chargualaf's final sentence.

"A favorable ruling could very well affect his sentencing in other gun-related counts," Lujan said.

Chargualaf, who was being held at Federal Correctional Institution Lompoc in California, is back on Guam after the court ruled he is entitled to a reduction of his sentence based on an updated sentencing range in the law, which was lowered by the Sentencing Commission.

Defense also requested that Chargualaf be given access to his prison records to help him prepare arguments during sentencing.

GIAA wins bid to keep meeting transcript confidential

By Kevin Kerrigan
kevin@postguam.com

The Supreme Court of Guam has ruled in favor of the A.B. Won PatGuam International Airport Authority's bid to keep confidential the transcript of a closed-door meeting held by the agency's board.

DFS Guam sought the release of that transcript in its ongoing legal battle with GIAA over the lucrative duty-free concession contract, which was awarded to rival Lotte Duty Free Guam.

DFS attorney Joyce Tang previously has stated that at an April 26, 2018, executive session the airport board "discussed in secret GIAA's agreement with Lotte Duty Free Guam," which she said "resulted in an unnecessary giveaway of several million dollars to Lotte to the substantial detriment of the people of Guam."

GIAA has denied DFS' requests for the transcript.

Airport attorney Genevieve Rapadas has argued that the April 26 executive session transcript "is not subject to the Sunshine Act since it involves privileged conversations between the board and its legal counsel regarding the pending litigation with DFS that is currently the subject of an appeal before the Supreme Court."

In its decision, the Supreme Court agreed with GIAA's position that "the Sunshine Act permits GIAA to withhold the executive session transcripts from disclosure until the litigation between GIAA and DFS has concluded."

However, a rape kit was not used on Nauta, according to past statements from Dr. Aurelio Espinola, who was Guam's chief medical examiner at the time. A rape kit was not necessary, Espinola has said, because Nauta was found fully clothed.

"I did not do any DNA because, in my opinion, it was not necessary because the girl was fully clothed," he said in the immediate aftermath of the teen's death. "I did not do it because it's useless."

Fred Gange, the brother of Nauta's grandmother, challenged that assertion. Gange has said his grandniece was wearing only a blouse and an undergarment when she was discovered.

The Post has asked the Office of the Attorney General where the rape charges stemmed from.

"We presented additional evidence to a grand jury who indicted on the new charges. Evidence received by our office is part of an ongoing case," said Carlina Charfauros, spokeswoman for the attorney general.

Acosta was initially arrested on burglary charges after witnesses informed police of multiple burglaries in the area.

While detained, Acosta reportedly confided in at least one other inmate that he killed Nauta, according to earlier court documents.

Acosta allegedly blamed the burglaries on his drug addiction, stating to police that he does things he normally wouldn't do when using methamphetamine, according to court documents.

Nauta lived in a house with very little security, in a room she reportedly built with her own two hands, a room that from the outside resembled a makeshift shed.

Acosta allegedly told police that he went into Nauta's room, which was dark, and that the girl startled him.

Killing Nauta was not his intention, Acosta allegedly stated, and that he "merely made a mistake."

Woman alleges she was raped by priest

By Mindy Aguon
mindy@postguam.com

A deceased priest is accused of raping a 10-year-old girl – telling her she was a good girl and would not go to hell because she was "with" a priest, according to a lawsuit filed in the District Court of Guam.

The victim, now a 54-year-old woman, filed a lawsuit against the Capuchin Franciscans and the Boy Scouts of America seeking $5 million in damages. The lawsuit accuses the late Louis Brouillard of forcibly raping her and sexually abusing her for two years in the 1970s while she attended the Barrigada church.

E.A.B., who used initials to protect her identity, alleges she was called to a back room in the Barrigada church where Brouillard allegedly pulled up her dress and digitally penetrated her and then raped her.

The priest allegedly tried to help the girl clean up the blood from the "forcible rape" and took her bloody underwear.

Brouillard allegedly said she was a good girl and that God "now loves her" and she would go to heaven even if she did bad things later in life.

The priest told her she would never go to hell because she was a "good girl" and because she had been with a priest, it would keep the devil away, the lawsuit states. E.A.B. continued to visit the church due to pressure from her parents and continued to be abused because she was afraid she could go to hell for disobedience.

Although she was a girl, E.A.B states she also was abused by Brouillard during swimming outings to the Lonfit River. Brouillard allegedly offered to teach her and others how to swim. On at least three swimming outings, the priest and scout master allegedly sexually abused the girl.

The abuse allegedly occurred once or twice a month over a two-year period, said attorney Michael Berkman.

After two years of abuse, Brouillard allegedly told her not to tell anyone about the sexual abuse and threatened that if she did, she would go to hell, court documents state.

The lawsuit seeks $5 million in damages.

Jr. denied the allegations. He said Carandang stole the certifications and other company documents and forged them himself.

Carandang told The Guam Daily Post last week he started work at DR Safety Consultant on June 17 and was given a safety training book to study. He expected that he would have time to take the required online courses and complete the testing to obtain the required certifications he needed.

However, one week after he started, Carandang said, he was assigned as the lead safety officer for the repair and painting of the exterior of the Federal Aviation Administration's tower at the A.B. Won Pat International Airport.

The federally funded project was awarded by the FAA to Citi Development and Construction Inc., which, in turn, hired DR Safety Consultant to provide the safety inspector for the job.

"On Monday the 24th of June they gave me all the certificates needed to become a safety officer," Carandang said. "The problem is, I have no safety training.

"No test, no training, they just handed me all the safety certifications," he said. Some of the certifications are backdated to February and May, although Carandang only started work with the company in June.

In a phone interview with the Post on Friday, Rillera said anything having to do with Carandang's allegations "would have to be taken up with my lawyers."

However, when asked if he provided Carandang with falsified safety documents, Rillera said, "Nope." Rillera said Carandang was fired because he "was a no-call, no-show worker."

Carandang says he got the runaround when trying to report what he believes to be fraud.

He says he went to the Office of the Attorney General, the Guam Police Department, and the governor's office. Each office advised they could not take his complaint and they referred him to another office. The Guam Department of Labor eventually referred him to the OSHA office in Honolulu.

GDOL special projects officer Malory Cruz confirmed that Carandang "completed a pre-screening form," which was reviewed.

The Guam Department of Labor primarily investigates cases of workplace discrimination, said Cruz, but "because this is more of a case of fraud, we referred him to OSHA and advised him to file a complaint under the whistleblower law."

Carandang confirmed that he spoke with OSHA and sent them documentation to support his claims. He was advised "they would look into it."

Carandang also said that he reported his claims to the FBI. Spokeswoman Michelle Ernst declined to comment.

DR Safety Consultant is located on Route 8 in Barrigada. The company was established in 2011. They have offices on Guam and Saipan.

According to its website, the company "has grown tremendously with the demand of construction safety programs." In addition the website states: "We have also expanded our business as a general construction contractor, as well as a safety supply and equipment vendor."

Sanchez be sentenced to 30 months in prison.

"The defendant had a history of substance abuse," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Marivic David. "He did all this not through coercion but by choice."

Tydingco-Gatewood said, "That's pretty gutsy to say, 'Send the drugs to my Homeland Security office.'"

The court denied Sanchez's request to serve a lesser sentence of 18 months in prison.

Tydingco-Gatewood sentenced Sanchez to 30 months in federal prison with credit for time served. She also agreed with the defense counsel and made a judicial recommendation to have Sanchez go to a medical facility where he can get treatment for the variety of medical issues noted in court.

She also made a judicial recommendation for Sanchez to attend a drug rehabilitation program. She said in court that if he successfully completes the program, Sanchez could get up to a year of his sentence dismissed.

He was ordered to surrender to the U.S. Marshals Service at a later date to begin his sentence.

After serving his prison sentence, Sanchez will be placed on two years of supervised release.

On May 2, 2016, Sanchez pleaded guilty to allegations that he conspired with others to distribute meth between March and December 2014 while employed with GHS.

According to the plea agreement, a friend arranged to put Sanchez in contact with Francisco Arias, who agreed to mail the meth to Sanchez at the Guam Homeland Security office.

Arias mailed the meth to the Homeland Security address in Agana Heights. The first attempt failed because the address was wrong. The package was seized by postal inspectors in Nevada. It was found to contain about 27 grams of 100% pure meth.

"That was the defendant's first chance. ... He knew, 'Maybe I should stop getting involved in this crime.' He didn't stop," David said during sentencing.

The second attempt succeeded, and the package was delivered to the Guam Homeland Security office. Sanchez "admitted he was supposed to receive a package containing methamphetamine but he could not remember who he was supposed to give the package to."

Court clearance, other fees to increase

By Oyaol Ngirairikl
deskeditor@postguam.com

If you need a Superior Court clearance for a job or other reasons, plan to pay double starting on Aug. 1.

Among the approved fees which are posted at the Guam Judicial Center and will take effect next month are:

- Promissory note processing: Increased from no cost to $25
- Note of intent: Increased from no cost to $50
- Warrant of arrest: Increased from no cost to $80
- Court clearance: Increased from $10 to $20
- Traffic clearance: Increased from $5 to $10
- Traffic court (minimum costs): Increased from $5 to 10
- Traffic court (maximum bench trial costs): Increased from $20 to $30

Shawn Gumataotao, director of policy, planning and community relations at the Judiciary of Guam, said the Judicial Council has been discussing the fees for various services the court provides since last year when the Judiciary realized its annual appropriations were going to decrease. The 34th Guam Legislature presented a budget for fiscal year 2019 that allotted spending levels that would be lower than what was needed to execute the missions of certain agencies.

Gumataotao said not all of the fees will directly impact local residents' everyday lives.

"The warrant of arrest will be a cost that's ... levied on the person who is being arrested when it's time for them to pay fines and such," Gumataotao said.

But for those who are applying for jobs and getting new insurance, the bite of a slight increase will be felt – a reality that Gumataotao acknowledged, but also noted that the Judiciary hasn't increased its fees since 2013.

"There were services the court was providing that we never even charged for, such as firearm certification," he said.

Gumataotao said the Judiciary's reduced budget and the increased costs for supplies and other items were among the factors that compelled the increase.

"The Judicial Council has approved several fee increases ... and they are meeting again next week. I believe and they'll be discussing the electronic monitoring fees," Gumataotao stated.

Gumataotao added that the Judiciary did share its plan to increase fees with the Guam Bar Association.

The Judiciary's website will be updated in the next two weeks prior to the effective date next month.

Praise for Flores to serve on the CAHA board

By Kevin Kerrigan
kevin@postguam.com

The Legislature's committee on heritage and the arts heard testimony Wednesday on the nomination of Guam artist and author Judy Seik Flores to serve on the Guam Council on the Arts and Humanities board of directors.

"Chamorro history and art have been my interest and passion since moving to Guam as a child with my teacher parents in 1957," Flores said.

Flores speaks fluent CHamoru. She and her husband Juan N. Flores have two grown children and seven grandchildren.

If confirmed this would be Flores' second term on the CAHA board. She previously served on the board from 2013 to 2016 and played an important role in the planning for the 12th Festival of Pacific Arts. She also served as folk arts coordinator for CAHA from 1985 to 1995. As a returning board member, Flores told the committee that she would contribute her "knowledge of CHamoru folkways, ability to speak the CHamoru language and years of experience helping to promote traditional and contemporary arts."

Speaker Tina Muña Barnes welcomed the nomination, telling Flores "the wisdom and the work that you do for our community is greatly appreciated."

"She would be a great asset to our board," said acting CAHA Director Jackie Balbas. Balbas said the traditional arts "have really flourished" in recent years thanks in part to Flores' contributions.

"Throughout my career, I have seen all of Judy's contributions and her impact on the community," Balbas said.

Flores' career and contributions to the art and culture of Guam are cited in Guampedia, which notes that she was the first graduate of the University of Guam Micronesian Studies master's program in 1996 and received her doctorate in the Arts of Oceania in 1999 from the University of East Anglia in England.

Her research has focused on the CHamoru people's identity through the arts. Flores is the founder of Guahan Art, which is a student art development organization that encourages talented young artists to display and market their artwork.
