Pediatric Feeding and Swallowing Disorders: Let's Figure It Out, Guam
01/31/20-02/02/20

Course description:

Course focuses on problem solving for children with complex swallowing and feeding disorders. Lecture, videos, and case analysis provide comprehensive strategies to carry out clinical and instrumental assessment and intervention to optimize functional outcomes evidence based. Sensorimotor learning principles and neuroplasticity provide a strong foundation to facilitate change. Complex problems include: airway complications; GI tract problems (e.g., gastroesophageal reflux and eosinophilic esophagitis); tube feeding & how to wean; identification of barriers to successful oral feeding and ways to overcome them; picky eaters/selective food choices.

Age and patient population course is designed for:
Young children (Birth to Three services) through school age

Course Objectives;

Apply knowledge of airway problems to make management decisions for children (including infants from NICU) with oropharyngeal dysphagia.

Identify and modify barriers to successful oral feeding (e.g., nutrition, GI tract, allergy, & neurologic conditions).

Incorporate findings from clinical and instrumental evaluations to make management decisions for children with complex underlying etiologies for dysphagia.

Use strategies for facilitating oral feeding in high-risk pediatric populations.

Demonstrate processes for advancing oral feeding in children who are tube feeders.

Implement intervention with a range of sensory and behavior based principles with picky eaters and selective eaters (e.g., autism spectrum).

Suggested audience:
Professionals involved in feeding and swallowing assessment and intervention for pediatric populations with varied etiologies, to include speech-language pathologists, occupational therapists, physical therapists, dietitians, psychologists, teachers, nurses, physicians, and social workers.
