GDOE hopes to scale back oversight by mid-2020

By John O'Connor
and Oyaol Ngirairiki
The Guam Daily Post

Guam Department of Education officials are back from meeting federal education officials in Washington, D.C., and hoping their talks will materialize into an end of the third-party oversight of GDOE's federal funds for nearly a decade.

A third-party fiduciary has been overseeing GDOE's management of federal grant funding since 2009. This came after the department was designated as a high-risk recipient of federal funds in 2003, when Guam DOE didn't have proper record-keeping and could not be audited.

The department currently receives about $60 million in block grant funding each year.

GDOE has now spent about $25 million on fiduciary services. While federal funding paid for the services in the first few years, Guam taxpayers have been paying the bills since.

The current rate is about $2.5 million per year in local funding - money GDOE hopes to be able to soon invest in schools.

"Back in January, we started this work on the Reconsideration Evaluation Plan. This was the plan that we were supposed to get done this year, in order to complete work on our high-risk program. After that was accomplished, the U.S. Department of Education "was going to come out here and do a final assessment here on Guam," GDOE Superintendent Jon Fernandez said.

TRIP TO DC: Guam Department of Education Superintendent Jon Fernandez meets with U.S. Department of Education Assistant Secretary of Education Frank Brogan last week in Washington, D.C. Photo courtesy of Jon Fernandez on Twitter

Two preassessment visits took place in May and July, with U.S. DOE acknowledging four out of seven high-risk conditions were met. The remaining conditions are the most critical, and include the third-party fiduciary and REP, according to Fernandez.

GDOE plans to complete the REP by December and is hoping U.S. DOE can come to Guam in February 2020 and conduct a final assessment.

"What we're hoping for is with all the progress we've made and documented, that we'll be in a substantially different position this coming July, when it comes time for renewing the special conditions letter we get every July. We're hoping we'll be in a transition mode, being able to scale back responsibilities of the third party and save some of those funds and return them to the school system," Fernandez said.

Mark Mendiola, education board chairman, said education officials are also observing how their efforts might be affected by issues in Washington.

"We're getting word that potentially there may be another shutdown in government because the budget in D.C. may not allow these folks to travel out to us," Mendiola said. He went on to defend GDOE's personal meeting with federal education officials.

"That's why it's important for us to continue to push efforts at a face-to-face type of meeting. Some folks said we should do this over teleconference. I say, look, we're far removed and if we don't go advocate for ourselves, who's going to advocate for us? ... It was a great feeling to have all three branches of government represented and present at this meeting."

Fernandez, Mendiola and Vice Speaker Telena Nelson met with Assistant Secretary Frank Brogan during their visit. Brogan oversees elementary and secondary education at USDOE.

Brogan made it clear that USDOE would ensure GDOE has tools necessary to sustain itself after the fiduciary is removed, Mendiola said.

Had it not been for the ability to access Brogan, Mendiola said, he believed the department would not be where it is today. He thanked former Guam Del. Madeleine Bordallo for initiating conversations two years ago, and the Legislature and governor for their involvement.

U.S. DOE is interested to know how the department might look after the fiduciary is removed, according to Fernandez.

GDOE may need to restructure, as well as push resources to support key components, such as the department's internal audit office, which Fernandez said he believed would play a critical role.

IRS sends collection trainers to Guam

The U.S. Internal Revenue Service has sent tax-collection analysts to the Guam Department of Revenue and Taxation for training.

The trainers will remain on Guam through the end of this month to train Rev and Tax's collection team.

"The last time that the IRS held local training for DRT was over 13 years ago," said Director Dafne Mansapit Shimizu. "The training which will be provided to our team will be invaluable as we work to collect on the outstanding taxes due to our government."

Lt. Gov. Joshua F. Tenorio and Sen. Sabina Perez were present at the launch of the IRS collections team training. "'We believe that investing in IRS training for our collections team is critical to ensuring that our team remains updated on any changes in the law, in addition to being exposed to best practices for tax collections," Tenorio said in a press release.

The training team consists of senior analysts from the IRS who have each been with the agency for well over 20 years, Rev and Tax stated.

Court grants Yona mayor's request to delay trial

By Mindy Aguon
mindy@postguam.com

MAYOR: Yona Mayor Jesse Mendiola Blas is escorted into the District Court of Guam by agents with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, United States Postal Service and Office of Homeland Security on Sept. 24. Post file photo

The criminal trial for Yona Mayor Jesse Mendiola Blas has been moved to Feb. 4, 2020.

District Court Chief Judge Frances Tydingco-Gatewood approved the defense motion to delay the trial which would have started on Dec. 2.

On Sept. 18, Blas was charged with six counts of extortion under color of official right and seven counts of bribery. He pleaded not guilty to the charges and is being held in jail pending trial.

The mayor is accused of accepting cash bribes from a confidential source who was cooperating with the government in an unrelated criminal case. The woman was recruited to approach Blas and posed as a drug dealer trying to obtain a Yona cluster mailbox to receive packages of methamphetamine, court documents state.

The confidential source, Brenda Kinian, was named in documents that were recently made public.

Kinian agreed to cooperate with authorities after she pleaded guilty to extorting $450,000 from the owners of a mom and pop store in Agat.

Prosecutors have said they have surveillance video and audio recordings of Blas "readily accepting" money from the cooperating defendant and requesting additional money in exchange for access to another cluster box unit. Blas is also allegedly shown on video discussing ways to avoid detection by law enforcement.

The federal government was tipped off about Blas' alleged criminal activity by two of his former girlfriends who were charged in federal court in separate and unrelated criminal cases.

Vickilyn Teregeyo and Lovelia Mendoza told authorities that Blas allowed drug traffickers to use cluster boxes intended for use by residents of the village to mail illegal drugs. Teregeyo faces drug charges in the Superior Court while Mendoza was sentenced to eight years in federal prison last year in a meth distribution case.

Defense counsel Joseph Razzano sought additional time to review and analyze the discovery, or court documents, in the case and allow the government time to provide additional information that has been requested by Razzano.

Judge Tydingco-Gatewood found that the "ends of justice" served by a continuance outweigh the best interest of the public and the defendant in a speedy trial, the order states.

She noted the failure to grant a postponement would deny Blas' attorney the reasonable time necessary for effective preparation for the trial.

The court imposed a series of new deadlines for the parties to exchange discovery and file pretrial motions.

A hearing on all motions is scheduled for Jan. 23, 2020, with jury selection and trial scheduled to begin in February 2020.
