SUBJECT: Travel Report: Justice Involved Individuals with Substance Use Disorders: Cultivating law and Medicine Partnerships

This report is prepared for your information and in accordance with the Trip Report and Reimbursement Form TRC-005 dated June 19, 2019 and pursuant to Rule 13.00 (Travel Clearance) of the Judiciary of Guam. It details my attendance at the above-referenced Conference held at the National Judicial College in Reno, NV from November 11-13, 2019.

This course was originally entitled "Faculty Preparation Seminar: Court-Involved Individuals with Substance Use Disorders;" however, the organizers determined that the course would act more of like a summit to gather judicial officers from different jurisdictions and provide a setting in which judges and medical providers could collaborate to address the growing epidemic of substance use disorder. The training was invaluable and provided additional methods of addressing substance use in the context of criminality. Further, we discussed the impact of trauma experienced by individuals which may contribute to the addition to substances and, ultimately, to criminal behavior. We reviewed the "ACES" questionnaire which identifies the trauma experienced by the justice involved individual and may inform the prosecution, defense and judge how best to handle a particular case.

While the initial objective of the class was to "train-the-trainer", the organizers determined that the our class would be the test model for developing a curriculum for a future seminar, conference or class based on our evaluations of the presentations delivered by members of the judiciary as well as practitioners or researchers in the field of substance use disorder. I would encourage the Judiciary of Guam to similarly gather judicial officers and practitioners in the field of substance use disorder (not specific to opiates) to address additional best practices that have been vetted by the National Judicial Opioid Task Force and the American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry. If you would like me to assist with organizing any such summit, presentation I would be more than happy and, in fact, would volunteer to do so.

I am attaching some conference material detailing the sessions attended over the three day course. Should you require any additional information about this matter, I am available to meet with you to further discuss next steps.

I look forward to continuing a judicial-provider collaboration to address the growing epidemic of substance use and it's serious impact on the community and on the judiciary's resources.

TRAINING REPORT

Date: 11/21/2019

To: John Q. Lizama - Administrator of the Courts
Via: Virginia Yasuhiro
Administrator, CSFC
From: Dr. Juan Rapadas
Clinical Psychologist, CSFC

The American Academy of Forensic Psychology (AAFP) holds four quarterly trainings on various topics specific to the practice of forensic psychology every year. Trainings are held in various cities across the country. For the November 2019 training, San Diego, California was the chosen location. The training was scheduled from November 13 through 17, 2019 with four full days of topics and one half-day topic on the last day. I was able to attend and complete the five days of training under these specific topics:

1) Forensic Report Writing by Deborah Collins, Psy.D., ABPP
2) Assessing Civil Capacities, Randy K. Otto, Ph.D., ABPP
3) Ethical Issues in Forensic Psychological Practice, Alan M. Goldstein, Ph.D., ABPP
4) On Being an Effective Expert Witness, Joel A. Dvoskin, Ph.D., ABPP
5) Negative Response Bias and Malingering Neurocognitive Dysfunction, Robert L. Denney, Psy.D., ABPP

All five presenters are Licensed Clinical Psychologists, are Board Certified/Diplomate Status in Forensic Psychology, have active clinical practices, and are well experienced in the field, compiling decades of forensic experience combined. Their presentations were professional, compelling and full of both historical and practical material that I could use immediately. They provided hard copies of their presentations and shared invaluable hints, tips, strategies, advice, concrete case examples, and specific tests that can aid me in my further development as a clinical psychologist specializing in forensic work.

The hope is that I am allowed to attend AAFP future trainings at least once every two years so that I can continue to hone my skills in this interesting and essential field and network with other licensed psychologists, as I continue my work at the Judiciary of Guam.

Sincerely,

Juan M. Rapadas, Ph.D.
CSFC Clinical Psychologist
