McGrath will face McConnell after winning Kentucky's Democratic primary

LEXINGTON, Ky. (Lexington Herald-Leader) – Former Marine Corps pilot Amy McGrath held off a surging state Rep. Charles Booker to win the Democratic primary for U.S. Senate in Kentucky on Tuesday, a week after ballots were cast, setting up a big-money showdown with U.S. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell in November.

Booker, who won 42.6% of the vote, won Kentucky's three largest cities – Louisville, Lexington and Bowling Green – but the more liberal voters in those cities weren't enough. McGrath surrounded Booker, winning victories throughout rural Kentucky to win 45.4% of the vote.

Booker conceded the race in an emailed statement shortly after 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, noting that he had only narrowly lost after being a relative unknown when he entered the race. He said that meant Kentucky was ready for "big, bold solutions."

Senate Republicans begin drafting new coronavirus relief

WASHINGTON (CQ-Roll Call) – Senate Republicans are beginning to put together their own fifth COVID-19 aid package, but with no apparent Democratic involvement it's unlikely to receive enough support to pass both chambers.

"What I can tell you without fear of contradiction is the focus will be kids, jobs and health care," Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said Tuesday following a closed-door lunch with GOP senators. "What I can tell you without fear of contradiction is that any bill that passes the Senate will have liability protections in it."

One section of that package is already being drafted, according to Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Subcommittee Chairman Roy Blunt. The Missouri Republican told reporters that he's directed the panel to begin working on legislation that would provide funding for more testing, additional work on therapeutics and vaccine research.

In US, biggest 1-day spike of pandemic

WASHINGTON (Reuters) – New U.S. COVID-19 cases rose by more than 47,000 on Tuesday according to a Reuters tally, the biggest one-day spike since the start of the pandemic, as the government's top infectious disease expert warned that number could soon double.

California, Texas and Arizona have emerged as new U.S. epicenters of the pandemic, reporting record increases in COVID-19 cases.

"Clearly we are not in total control right now," Dr. Anthony Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, told a U.S. Senate committee. "I am very concerned because it could get very bad."

Fauci said the daily increase in new cases could reach 100,000 unless a nationwide push was made to tamp down the resurgent virus.

"We can't just focus on those areas that are having the surge. It puts the entire country at risk," he said.

Fauci said there was no guarantee of a vaccine, although early data had been promising: "Hopefully there will be doses available by the beginning of next year," he said.

COVID-19 cases more than doubled in June in at least 10 states, including Texas and Florida, a Reuters tally showed. In parts of Texas and Arizona, hospital intensive care beds for COVID-19 patients are in short supply.

More than 126,000 Americans have died from COVID-19 and millions have lost their jobs as states and major cities ordered residents to stay home and businesses closed. The economy contracted sharply in the first quarter and is expected to crater in the second.
